New Look Library - at GEH

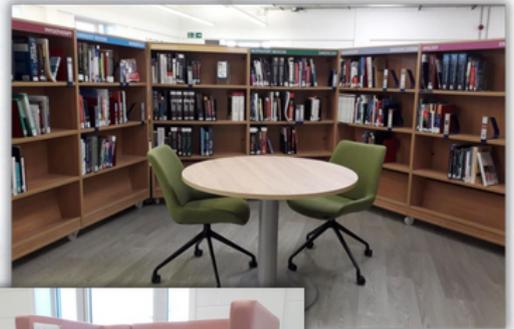

pics & words by Bev

Here we have some photos of our new look library at the GEH.

The William Harvey Library opened at the end of 2006, as part of the George Eliot Training & Education Centre (GETEC). There has been some changes since then, but no more than this year when a whole new refurb was in order.

New flooring, fresh paintwork and some lovely new furniture.

Why not come along and have a look round.

Why William Harvey?

We wanted to give a name to our new library in GETEC, so the library manager at the time, way back in 2006 decided on one William Harvey.

Born in Folkestone in 1578, a physician by trade, discovered that blood is pumped around the body by the heart, via veins and arteries.

You can learn more about William Harvey from the BBC History website by zapping the QR code.

Library Day

During Libraries Week (an annual event celebrating all Libraries) in October saw our second Library Day event. Both our GEH and SWIFT libraries had a book competition, games and food and drink.

Lucky winners of our book competition had to find the book on the shelf which had the Golden Ticket. They could then choose a book they fancied from our selection.

We also had some games, like the very appropriate 'Operation', Connect 4 and Buckaroo.

GEH

After the hard work finding the elusive Golden Ticket, people could feast on our lovely munchies washed down with a hot or cold drink.

Proving popular last year we thought we would hold the event again. Look out for the same again next year and join in the fun!
